

Basic Hypnosis Terms

Abreaction – Clinical definition: The expression and consequent release of a previously repressed emotion, achieved through reliving the experience that caused it. Typically for our use, an extreme and uncomfortable or continuing emotional outburst.

Note that Abreactions for some are Catharsis for others!

Catharsis- discharge of pent-up emotions so as to result in the alleviation of symptoms or the permanent relief of the condition.

Beta/Alpha/Theta/Gamma/Delta Brainwave states

- Beta state (alertness, active thinking and concentration).
- Alpha state (light hypnosis).
- Theta state (day dreaming, deep hypnosis and light sleep).
- Gamma (deep meditative cohesive focus)
- Delta state (deep sleep)

Possible Client Signs of Brainwave States

Gamma- Unknown but may be fully vocal and yet as “deep” and connected as in Theta.

Beta- Opened eyes, talking, fully conscious, alert, moving and aware of surroundings

Alpha- Light- Relaxed, calm, may be moving slightly, primary focus not on immediate surroundings.

Alpha -Deep- Very relaxed, little movement, eyes closed but possibly moving, sighs, growling stomach, limp hands. Awareness varies, can be quite aware of physical surroundings.

Theta- Very Deep non-moving state. Sometimes slower talking. Deep breathing. REM- Rapid Eye Movement. Primary focus not at all on physical surroundings but again can be aware of the body while nearly all focus is elsewhere. Snoring can happen here.

Delta- Deep sleep, no communication happens in Delta.

Other Terms

Counting out - (Also termed: bringing up) The process for bringing a client back to everyday awareness. Classically numbers are used in “counting out”. BQH offers a script without use of numbers.

Deepener - Processes used to assist client in achieving a deeper consciousness state.

Induction - Technically defined, the technique of hypnotizing a person. In BQH, bringing a person into deep relaxation and connection, one may term this hypnosis as well.

Somnambulism - Technically defined, the deepest state of hypnosis where the client is said to recall nothing of the experience at all. (Dolores Cannon’s definition is where the client fully and completely experiences all emotions and knowledge of the character experienced and may or may not recall the experience.)

Subconscious - The 88% of our mind that is mostly below the level of our awareness. The part of our mind responsible for reflexive action, ideomotor responses and contains the positive and negative associations we've made throughout our life. (Dolores Cannon’s Definition is ‘The Higher Self’.)
