

Business Basics

Licenses/Laws

Because our practitioners live around the globe, we aren't able to offer any specific guidance other than you need to check your location for applicable license requirements and laws. They vary widely and it is up to you to do your own research on applicable requirements. Pay attention to the words that you use to describe your business and understand that many words and terms can be illegal or restricted depending on your location.

And of course, as always, consult an attorney for any legal advice.

Insurance

Liability Insurance is available for Energy and Alternative Health Practitioners.

If you have an office space, you might be required to carry liability insurance or property insurance, so check your lease. If you decide to do sessions in your home, check your homeowner's policy or rental agreement for details.

Location

It is common for new practitioners to start out doing sessions in their own home or the homes of their clients. You might not know what kind of situation you are agreeing to if you travel to the home of a client so ask questions before-hand. For example, will you be there alone, or will kids be underfoot, pets, relaxing place for the client to be, etc.

Office space- your own or shared. Some locations have rooms to lease by the day or even by the hour.

Many Practitioners travel and do sessions in hotel rooms and most require the client to cover that cost.

Yoga studios, health centers, acupuncture clinics, crystal shops, metaphysical bookstores, churches and community centers are other places you might check for possible session space availability.

The basic space requirements are- privacy, restroom access and a generally quiet atmosphere. Additional considerations- seating for you both and a way for your client to recline. Beds, sofas and recliners work well. Massage tables are not generally recommended but can be used if there are no other options.

An additional level of credibility you can easily obtain is to become a legally ordained minister. It is much easier than you might think and can in some cases may provide another layer of legal protection for your practice.

The Universal Life Church (ULC) is a multi-denominational religious organization with millions of members all over the world. Over the decades, the ULC has garnered global recognition for its promotion of universal togetherness and religious expression around the world. By becoming an ordained minister of the Universal Life Church, you'll be granted all the rights and privileges afforded to clergy members of other faiths – including the ability to perform legal wedding ceremonies. Ordination also opens the door for you to start a personal ministry, preside over other religious and spiritual ceremonies, and much more.
