

How to change scenes

When you feel as if you have gotten as much information as you can from a particular scene or experience, or your client has stalled in the current scene, you can simply direct your client to move to another one. Make sure you give your client time to answer and always start with the “make sure you have told me everything important” line below.

Here are several common phrases you can use to move sessions along:

- “Okay so make sure you are telling me everything that is important about this scene...”
- “...and if you have told me everything that is important we are just going to let that scene fade away...just fade away.”
- “We are going to drift away from that scene and drift and float to (an important day, an important time, a significant experience, the most relevant day, etc. whatever phrase fits)
- “Okay so we are going to just leave that scene now...just let it fade away.”
- “We are going to move to most necessary time and relevant place.”
- “Feel yourself drifting and floating and being drawn to another time and another place.”
- “Feeling yourself being pulled into another time, another place.”
- “And there you are, tell me what is happening?”
