

Heart and Mind Coherence

The heart and mind often function in a non-synchronistic manner. Humans tend to focus on and give the mind more power than the heart, and this exercise helps create more balance and coherence between them, allowing the client to begin to feel more into the session rather than focus on the analytical part of the brain.

(Client should be reclining at this point)

And now place your right hand upon your heart.

And breathe deeply.

Deeply in, and deeply out.

In through the nose and out through the mouth.

And I will do the same.

(Let your client hear you breathe, too)

Just breathe in and breathe out.

Feel your chest expand and feel your hand move up.... And down.... With your breath.

And feel yourself relaxing, letting go, letting any cares of the day just fade away.

Breathe.

And now, I want you to imagine that your heart itself is breathing that air in...and out.

Just imagine that your heart is breathing and then moving the air throughout your body.

We are bringing the heart and mind into coherence as we do this.

Just breathe.

Each breath in and out of your heart connects you completely with your original life force energy.

Each breath in and out reminds us that and our deepest connection with Source and our own greatest wisdom resides within the realm of the heart space.

In and out.

In and out.

Your heart knows.

My heart also knows.

In and out.

And we are aligning our energies, and

We are aligning our hearts and our minds.

Each breath in and out of your heart connects you completely with Source.

Each breath in and out connects your heart, with my heart and with Source.

And now you may place your hands in any position in which they are comfortable and just relax again and we will begin.
