

Optional Relaxation Techniques

The Water Alchemy portion of the session will almost always help calm the energy of a nervous client and having them be beautifully ready for their BQH Session, but sometimes, you may have an overly anxious client who needs a little more assistance.

The most important way to help your client relax is for you to be relaxed yourself, and to exhibit and project calm, relaxed energy. Taking a few minutes before your client arrives to help get yourself in the proper 'state' is always a smart thing to do.

At this point you will want to make certain that the client is warm, comfortable, at ease and ready to begin. It is common for the client to be a little nervous with "butterflies in their stomach." This is common especially if they have not done anything like this before. That kind of energy is good and helps create the experience! Try not to label a bit of excited energy as too many nerves, because a bit of that is just what you want.

However, if your client verbalizes something that seems a bit more extreme or you sense that, you can always help. If your client is still visibly nervous...consider these optional relaxation techniques:

- Progressive relaxation or classical hypnosis deepening script
- Reiki, Quantum Touch, Therapeutic Touch or other hands on body relaxation modality you may be familiar with or use
- Toning or singing or speaking a light language
- Music or binaural beats
- Time. Just give them some time to lay and get comfy and settle down.
