

Rewinding Time

Rewinding time is a great “go-to” tool that can be used in different session situations. For example, I might choose to rewind time if the client:

- Experiences only “random” or basic current life memories
- Experiences other realms but with little to no communication, information or connection with guides, healers or the Higher Self
- Relates one or more experiences that you, as a practitioner, find perplexing, random or fleeting

Anytime you have the intuition that going back to the time before birth could help answer questions or assist in healing for your client you should consider doing so. Also, remember that rewinding time is in itself a deepener and can be used for the client who just seems to have a lot of conscious mind interference or analyzing going on that might be blocking their ability to explore.

Rewinding Time basic script and example

Okay now we are going to just leave (whatever scene they are in) behind...just leave that scene and I want you to drift and float...just drift and float

Drifting and floating we are now going to rewind time...we are going to just go back into time...drifting and floating backwards into time when you were younger than you are today...back, back, back, back to younger days when:

(REFER TO YOUR CLIENT’S BACKGROUND HERE AND ADD THEIR OWN PERSONAL DETAILS Keep your interview notes here to assist)

To illustrate how to continue with the script above, here’s an example of a woman who has grown children:

Back to a time when your school age children were still living at home, back to a time when they were still there, and you were a full-time mom (brief pause)

And still we are going to go back, back into time when your children were just toddlers at home (brief pause)

And we are going to go back even farther, back, back into time when you were first married to Bob. (brief pause)

And we are just going to go back even farther than that...back to when you were in school yourself, living in the city with your parents (brief pause)

But we are still going to go back. Back, back, back to the time when you were just a small child, before you even began school (brief pause)

And we are going to go back even more...back, back to the time when you were just an infant, just a baby in a crib and not yet able to walk or even crawl (brief pause)

Back, back, back even farther, to when you were within your mother's womb, feeling the warm dark place and hearing the beat of her heart. (somewhat of a longer pause here... why?- sometimes clients begin to talk here... LET THEM, if not continue on...)

And still we are going to go back. You are getting smaller and smaller as we go, smaller and smaller all the way to the day of conception (brief pause)

And we are still, going to go back even farther into time. We are going to go back to the time where you were making the decision to come into the life as (CLIENT NAME). Back when you were making the decision to become a human being. You are there now, and the decision is being made (pause)
