

One of the most important aspects of developing trust and rapport with your new client is how you communicate with each other early in the process. Since these days, much of that communication comes in the form of email, directory inquiries or social media posts, having a good communication plan will help set you both up for success.

Responses to any inquiry should be timely. It is very frustrating for clients to reach out for help, only to have that request go unheeded for days on end. If you are out of contact for whatever reason, consider putting up a 'out of contact temporarily' message on your website or auto response on your email platform.

Below, I've provided 3 sample emails, with responses, as a guide to help you get started if you're new to this part of the communication – the first with a generic request for help; the second with abuse elements to show how to be sensitive to this situation; and lastly a relatively incoherent, rambling inquiry where you're not quite sure what they want/need.

Sample email requests and responses

1. Sample one- Generic inquiry, few details

Dear Candace,

I would like to schedule a BQH session with you at your earliest convenience, thank-you.

Love,

Sally

Dear Sally,

Thank you so much for contacting me about a BQH Session. May I ask please, how did you find me?

Also, what is the main reason you are seeking a session?

Currently, I am scheduling in the month of _____.

Kind regards,

Candace

(The reason you want to know how the client found you is two-fold. Firstly, you want to assess the validity of the inquiry and if they were referred by someone you know/trust then you're off to a great start. Secondly, the answer will help you validate the marketing tools you're using. Setting an expectation on availability will also help you 'qualify' them and help understand their state of urgency)

2. Sample two- trauma/abuse

Dear Candace,

I have been following your blog and watching you on YouTube for a number of years. I feel like I know you! I am interested in having a BQH session online. I have a history of abuse in my childhood and also in my last two marriages. I have been in counseling, but feel I need a deeper level of healing to move forward in my life. Thank you,

Mary Smith

Dear Mary

Thank you so much for letting me know you have been watching my shows and reading my articles. I hope they have been helpful and informative.

BQH can be extraordinarily helpful for those who have experienced abuse and trauma in their lives but would like to know a bit more. Would you be able to provide me with some more details? Are you currently in therapy and counseling? Are you living in a safe place at the moment? Do you have any support?

I am currently scheduling in the month of _____.

I am also available for consulting sessions if you would like to talk a bit more about all of this before we do an actual BQH session.

Let me know!

Sending you blessings,

Candace

(Note the second paragraph acknowledges her situation but keeps a therapeutic distance, while remaining interested in her situation, to help qualify if you can help)

3. Sample three- not entirely clear what is being communicated

Dear Candace,

I hope you can help me. Currently I am deeply immersed in the program of exaltation provided to me my main star family guide Zenequan. He has helped me so very much and I am sure I have raised my level of energy quotient in the last four cycles. But I am so confused about my current life purpose plan and how it connects with my origin aspects and blue ray contract here on Gaia.

Do you think BQH could help? Also, when are you available and how many sessions do you think I would need to renew my contract, balance myself and get back on track?

Thanks,

Liam E.

Dear Liam,

Thanks for contacting me about a BQH session. Can you let me know how you found me and learned about BQH?

Would you have time for a brief phone call where we can talk about this a little bit more? I have a few questions about the information you have shared with me and it would be much easier for me to talk with you on the telephone than to ask some of my questions via email.

I have a few minutes on Tuesday morning at _____ Central time, would that time slot work for you?

Let me know, thanks.

Kind regards,

Candace

(One of the most important elements of the response above are the words “brief” and “you have a few minutes.” This allows you to control your time with prospective clients who, based on their initial email like Liam’s above, may want to take a considerable amount of your time before a session and before you’ve even decided if you can, or want to, help them)
