

Session Synchronicities and Connecting with Clients in Dreams

The very first time I realized that my world did/would interact with clients was with a particular client who had some mysterious intestinal issues that the doctors could not explain nor help him with, and it was the main reason he wanted a session.

The night before the session, I dreamed he came to my office and opened his mouth and a mass of worms came out and fell on the floor.

I told him about the dream before we even had a session and asked if he had been checked for parasites and he actually said he had not. Then that got him to thinking that he had, several months prior, been caught in a flood in Mexico and actually swallowed a significant amount of dirty flood water during his escape.

After starting to watch my dreams, I started to then watch my own "real" life. I realized that life and dreams absolutely worked in similar ways to deliver information which then allowed me to start seeing things match up in that way as well.

Below find two detailed stories, one a dream I had hours before one session and the other one, the few hours of my own life right before another session! I suggest all quantum healers be on the lookout for dream and synchronistic information that might be presented to them to assist their clients.

Dream the Couple Watching the Play (Auditorium Dream)

In one dream, I came off the stage and sat right in the front row, in the center seat. There was a couple next to me, the man directly to my right.

The man was crying and focused upon the stage. The "next play" was being set up. I could see underneath the curtain and I saw boots, men in military boots and horse hooves. I did not know or recognize the man.

The following day I have a Quantum Healing session.

The client had a fairly typical past life of a man who lived in the woods for a time, but in his older life married and lived in a house and with three children and experienced a very happy life. As I moved him forward in his life in one scene he and his wife were leaving their house. He didn't know if he would be back. He was in a city, he was walking with his wife, they were dressed nicely. They were going to see a play. It was the very first play he had ever seen.

As he sat in his seat, the front row center, I tried to get him to see the playbill or tell me what play he was getting ready to see. All he could tell me was that he heard the boots from behind the curtain.

As it turns out he starts crying saying "I don't want to leave, I want to see the play..." He dies right in his seat. He was crying and was very sad because did not want to leave his new life – and his wife.

This client was also one who before we ever got to the scene of the play and his death, I could occasionally see what he was seeing as he was describing it, or even at some points just before he would describe it or hear what his SC was going to say, just before he said it. This turned out to be helpful more than once as he cried a lot during the session and it was difficult for him to communicate, even with me assuring him he was okay and could view the scene from a distance. I found it easy to finish his sentences for the recording because I was (often) seeing what he was seeing!

This man was the fourth member of a family I had regressed. The other three had amazing sessions, actually some of my very best and favorite...and with all three of the others, I was able to connect and see at least parts of what they were seeing during their session!

Animals Team Up to Deliver Soul Messages

Hi Everyone,

So, a family of 3 came to see me. A man and woman and their grown son. The man was the one who made all the arrangements and called me, and we spoke at length on the telephone. He is a CONVENTIONAL physician who works in a large well-known hospital in his area! So that is rare right there.

A very interesting man. Very awake and open. His son, young but also awake and open, had a very good session, but standard stuff in that regard. The father's session is one I still am processing and will write about when I get a chance, it was very unique for me and a bit strange for him. His wife was a former physician and is the client I refer to below in the story.

She was so quiet. So soft spoken! The man was doubtful she would participate fully or at all and wondered if she would have any sort of chance at an experience. She was the 3rd session out of the 3 and my first question to her was, did she really want to do a session? Because we didn't have to at all and could either spend our time differently or cancel altogether if she wanted to, that would be fine with me. She was so quiet and hard to read. Well. She said, "Yes I want to have a session."

Surprises for everyone were to follow! Here is what happened –

As a practitioner of Quantum Healing it has become common if not expected to connect with the higher consciousness of my client prior to our appointment. Sometimes this happens in my nighttime dreams, sometimes with daydreams or intuitive “hits,” sometimes guides deliver information that is pertinent to the life of the person that is coming to see me.

Recently several species from the Animal Kingdom teamed up and made this connection between me and my client in a fun and extraordinary way!

I live on a farm and a normal day is one filled with animals from horses to dogs, chickens to cats, bees to birds and all manner of rural wildlife who make daily appearances. So, it is normal to encounter animals, but the number and type of encounters I had one morning, all within a short period of time right before meeting my client, was eye-popping!

The session was at 9am so I was up early to do the farm chores before driving to my Wellness Studio. After feeding the dogs and cats, I headed to the barn to tend the horses. As I was walking down the lane I saw a rabbit. Then another rabbit, then another, and another and another and I started counting how many rabbits were there because I was so surprised at how many I saw and how many just kept showing up in front of my feet as I walked. They weren't baby rabbits either, they were grown cottontails and, as I continued to walk to the barn and got closer, they began to run.

This isn't unusual either, but often they will just hold very still and let me pass by. None of them did that this morning. I watched as these rabbits run, and jump, and do loops, and circles, and straight lines, up and down the lane. I know my jaw dropped as this was happening because I kept counting, and there were eight of them...eight rabbits running like I have never seen rabbits run in my life. They even ran into the horse paddock and ran circles around one of my ponies! I wondered what was going on? Were they eating funny mushrooms I didn't know about? And wow, so many of them! I was laughing it was so funny and out of the ordinary.

At the barn the swallows swooped and circled my head. On the way back from the barn, dozens of purple martins swirled and sang in the sky and accompanied me as I walked back to the house. I started to wonder if my client was some sort of animal communicator? Hmmmmm.

I got dressed and ready to go and got in my truck for the drive to town. As soon as I left the driveway “Harriet” our resident red-tailed hawk lifted off the electrical line, flew above the truck with a lovely and perfect pirouette and then flew off to the North. We had just remarked a day or so before that we hadn't seen Harriet in a while and wondered where she was. I was on high alert for more animals at that point. What else would I see on the very short 15-minute drive to the Studio?

I didn't have to wait long. Just after the first stop sign, as I was crossing the road, the biggest most beautiful and colorful male pheasant I have ever seen walked calmly in front of the truck and crossed the road. He was almost ethereally lit with a beam of sunlight. I watched and felt my jaw drop again. Was that even a real pheasant? He practically glowed with color. And while I have seen pheasants before, of course, never so closely, and walking so slowly out in the open!

A group of 3 turkey vultures were next, doing their job of removing the remains of an armadillo from the middle of the road. They lifted off the road as they do, but two of them flew off to the left while the third flew in front of me for longer than is normal and eventually up out of the way of the road as he flapped his huge wings.

Another couple of miles passed when I saw another animal in the road, a turtle. I slowed down and swerved widely around her as she also crossed my path.

I watched a few meadowlarks fly by and a pair of bluebirds, too and then turned on the main highway that heads into town. As extraordinary as all of these sightings were I imagined that whatever all of this animal activity was about – was likely over as I was getting closer to more people, houses and buildings and less rural land. But that thought was about to be proven to be incorrect.

I had just slowed down in front of the railroad tracks that mark the entrance to town when, out of nowhere, from alongside those railroad tracks to my left came a beautiful 8-point buck gently loping along and he crossed the road toward town directly in front of my truck. He was so close I could clearly see the fuzz on his antlers, and I watched him disappear behind an old white house into some trees. Deer usually move at dawn and dusk and at night, seeing this fellow so close and running into town in broad daylight isn't something one normally sees around here.

I was certain, that day's session was going to be remarkable. And it was.

My client was a soft-spoken woman who said she had no claim or desire to be an animal communicator and had no apparent deep connection with animals of any kind. As a matter of fact, she did not even have a pet, and hadn't since she was a child, but, she very definitely watched the birds in her garden, and described some unusual behavior she had noticed in the past. So, I simply noted that fact and we planned on asking her Higher Self what, if anything, these animal sightings might have meant.

She had a beautiful session and turned out to be a rare, natural somnambulist, meaning, she really had no recall, whatsoever about the experience she had just had. We talked about it and I filled in some of the details and of course she would have the opportunity to listen to the audio recording of the entire session whenever she desired in the future.

Her questions and concerns were answered by her Higher Self which showed itself to her as a blue pulsing light surrounded by swirling golden waves. Her Higher Aspect was similar to her "every day self" in that it wasn't overly chatty. The answers given were brief but succinct.

I asked about the animals. Were they messages for her? And why were they shown to me and not to her directly?

The animals did have specific messages for her and as I was already connected in a higher consciousness way to my client with our intention of working together and having a session, and as I am already quite connected to the animal kingdom and notice this type of deeper communication from them, it was appropriate to have it work this way. The client's Higher Self's vibration and intention connected with the spirit realm of animals to connect with my own Higher Self, and then, the physical animals created the movements and action for me to record with my own conscious mind!

So what were the messages? Here are some highlights: The rabbits. The message from the 8 rabbits was- MOVE! It was time to stop being sedentary, it was time to begin to exercise and specifically, begin running again for the physical health of her body. Running would get everything moving again in her life that currently felt stagnant.

The birds, have their own innate wisdom. Each species has something specific to share. Meditate on each. The pheasant was extremely significant because “she was not currently really noticing or appreciating any of the brilliant colors of the planet and of her physical life.”

The turtle brought the message that the “slow part” of her life as a mother was over. It was time to move, experience, create and explore!

The buck. This was her guardian animal. This known protector of animals of the forest was one she could call on herself whenever she wished. Interestingly, I just now myself realized the 8 points of her guardian matched the number of rabbits that were running around in such a crazy way. The number 8 usually signifies balance, between the spiritual and material world, between work and family, and also of karmic balance. All of these were relevant concepts in her session.

Watching her connect to these experiences was a delight I don't mind telling you it was a lot of fun to have this animal experience and have the Higher Consciousness aspect of this client talk about all of the animals as if it was there experiencing them with me. I never cease to be amazed at the ways our Higher Selves attempt to talk and guide us and am learning to really pay attention to our animal friends, inside and outside the house. They are truly communicating with us in ways we're just now beginning to understand.
