

Session Variables and Possible Approaches

“What if my client does not see anything?”

- What are you experiencing?
- What are your impressions?
- What do you hear?
- Feel?
- Sense?
- What are your emotions?
- What sensations are you feeling in your body?

“It’s not working”, “I’m not deep enough” or “I’m doing it wrong”

- Reassure your client ALL IS WELL.
- Remember to keep your own emotions in check. Your energy at this stage is critically important.
- Keep asking questions.
- Keep reassuring them.

If your client says “I don’t know”

- “What if you did know?”

“Nothing is happening, it’s all black (or grey)”

- Try a variation of the question first.
- You can respond that they are likely in the most amazing place of all...the void of creation.
- They are a creator and so, from this place, they can create the experience they wish to have.
- You can also possibly suggest that they can create light there to see.

A rare few clients will not speak no matter what! That does NOT mean they are not having a profound experience. Remember, you are not in control of the client’s experience, their higher self is, and they will have the session they are supposed to have. You just continue on...smoothly...calmly.

- Ask for healing if that’s what they needed.
- Ask for understanding to be shared.
- Ask for knowledge to be transferred.
- Act as if everything is completely normal, because it is.

If your client begins to cry - this is almost always a great sign

- Means releasing of emotions and story.
- Crying can be acknowledged and can be encouraged with statements like, “you are now releasing the _____ (limitation, root cause of the illness or whatever...) with your tears.”
- Keep the water alchemy intention in mind.

If your client needs to use the restroom or if YOU need to use the restroom. It’s a good thing.

- Tell the client they will be releasing their “limitation, anger, whatever” when they go.
- Tell them they will be even more relaxed when they return.
- Tell them we will just put the experience on pause and return- no problem.
- If YOU need to use the restroom, do!
- Wait for a relatively calm neutral moment when your client seems stable and simply tell them, “Okay Now I am going to take a quick little break and I will be right back. Until I return, just continue to observe (the current scene) and when I get back we can continue...”

If your client reports pain

- Try not to overreact, pain can mean many things.
- Try not to even use the word “pain” with them when acknowledging their “discomfort,” as that is a much better word to use with a client who is in a suggestible state.
- You can actually attempt to talk to the pain!
- Or you can talk to the part of the body in which the client is experiencing it. As an example if the client says they have a pain in their arm you can ask, “May we speak to the arm or the source of this discomfort?”

It is useful to know that there are some practitioners who maintain that pain is a way for the Conscious Mind (CM) or “attachments” to interrupt the session. Use your intuition or discernment or possibly other tools (mediumship skills, energy reading, psychic sight, dowsing) to discover the root cause or address the issue. Severe or disruptive body pain is very rare in BQH. If you do find this occurring, you may wish to gently end the session in a normal fashion and re-assess your options.

The current life

- Firstly, know that this is common.
- If the experience is a traumatic one, it is surfacing for possible release.
- If the experience is a happy one, it may be the SC communicating and reminding the client of positive events.
- If the client experiences two or more “happy” or positive events you may wish to “rewind time” to before the current incarnation to ascertain this life’s purpose with their light council.

A combative client

- Remain calm and positive no matter what.
- Remind them that they are in control and are powerful creators.
- Remind them that whatever their reactions, they are coming up for a reason and need to be examined and that remaining calm will help.

A quiet or non-responsive Higher Self

- Remind the client that the Higher Self (HS) can be a subtle voice/energy.
- Remind the client that the first thing that comes into their mind is what they should share.
- Remind the client that the HS is not separate from them.
- Remind the client that the HS is always connected to them.
- Remind the client that their HS is not an outside force that takes them over.
- Remind the client that they must lend their voice to the HS.
- Ask for help- ask for a guide to come forth to translate for the HS.
- Use other tools, modalities or your own intuitive guidance if necessary.

What if the Client feels like the session was a failure?

- Intention is everything! Even if it seems like nothing much happened, remain open.
- The HS arranges very small shifts sometimes.
- Small shifts can lead to bigger ones.
- Discuss the possibility of a repeat session after a bit of time has passed if this is what you have decided you do in your own practice.
- Some rare people simply refuse to participate in a session and participation is key.
- Consider your own client prep - could you have done a better job talking about expectations or practicing with your client.
